EXHIBIT A

FRANK HARWOOD: 'THE SPARK'

Acrylic on canvas, 81 x 99 cm

ARTIST'S STATEMENT: "This painting is based on an image of women in a welding class during the war. I was struck by the bold composition, dramatic lighting, and look of deep concentration on all their faces. It reminded me of the paintings of Joseph Wright of Derby, and his similar use of lighting in his paintings of scientific experiments and the dawn of the industrial revolution. These are serious women doing serious work, they remind me of the women of my childhood, serious women doing serious work in the cotton mills of Lancashire. The goggles give their faces an otherworldly aspect, the deep shadows lend an air of mystery. Are they welding, or taking part in a scientific experiment, or some supernatural incantation? I like using a simple graphic style, similar to my childhood comics, with bold outlines, flat colour fields, and areas of bright pattern. I choose subjects that have a resonance, that suggest moods and half remembered experiences. My paintings are not autobiographical, but they are my way of reflection, self examination and meditation."

WYLYE VALLEY ART TRAIL 2021

"The wonderful WYLYE VALLEY ART TRAIL is happening this year, from Saturday 1st to Sunday 9th May. With all necessary precautions in place makers will be welcoming art lovers into their studios, and whatever tickles your visual fancy, there'll be someone on the Trail who's showing it: from sculpture to jewellery, ironwork to glass, furniture to installation and every type of painting, there's definitely something for everyone. This is the twentieth year of the Wylde Valley Art Trail. The first one took place in the aftermath of the devastating foot and mouth disease, and the similarities between then and now are unsettling: both times the decision not to cancel was hard, but most definitely the right choice. As Nick Andrew, founder and co-ordinator of the Trail, says: 'We have had to steer a delicate and twisty path between the urgent desire to bring visual art and craft out of lockdown and into the open again, and the important considerations for the safety of visitors and exhibitors alike'. Along with every sector of life, the arts have been hit hard by the pandemic. Now that the vaccine rollout is proceeding apace, we are all itching to get out and on with life, so what better way to do that than going on the Wylde Valley Art Trail 2021?"

OD ARTS FESTIVAL 2021: ALONE WITH EVERYBODY

"OD ARTS FESTIVAL returns this May, bringing exhibitions, performances, film and workshops by local and international artists to not-so-sleepy Somerset. New and specially-sited artworks will pop up around the villages of East Coker and West Coker, in cafes, halls, houses, chapels and fields, and also online for a special digital programme. Devised before the hiatus of the global pandemic, the guiding theme for the festival of 'Alone with Everybody', explores loneliness - what it is, how we continue to experience it, where it comes from, and how it might be addressed. A programme of playful, experimental and performative artworks will probe different aspects of aloneness, and ask visitors to discuss how it might be liberating as well as difficult to be alone. With over 20 events and exhibitions across two villages and online platforms, artists, neighbours and visitors will come together through Od Arts Festival to think, dream and ponder what it means to be alone with everybody."

WILLIAM KENTRIDGE

BEAF 2021

"BOURNEMOUTH EMERGING ARTS FRINGE festival returns this summer and in the face of the pandemic the ultimate question has arisen from the chaos. This year's festival theme is asking us what it means to be human, inspired in part by the work of the renowned South African artist William Kentridge, whose short animated film Other Faces will be the centre-piece of the main exhibition in our new gallery space in Boscombe. Alongside the animated film, audiences can expect a thought provoking and reflective programme of new work from 40 commissioned artists who despite the pandemic have continued to produce their work for the festival. There will be over 150 events happening across the festival week ranging from independent film screenings, to live performances and exhibitions and a full programme of workshops, talks and family friendly events both in person and online. BEAF's curated exhibition 2B Human is featured in their contemporary arts space Boscombe Arts Depot (BAD) and this opens prior to the festival from 29 May. Featuring art, photography, film, video, sculpture and interactive digital work, this will be their opening exhibition to what is planned for a year round programme. BAD will become the hub for the festival, providing a new arts cinema, a theatre and workshop space."

B-SIDE FESTIVAL 2021

"It's been a busy year for B-SIDE despite the COVID restrictions and we have been regularly in contact with our commissioned artists who created their proposals for the Festival way back in 2019! COVID has had an impact on everyone, and the restrictions and lockdowns have made it impossible for many of our artists to deliver their projects in the way they wanted to. We have worked with our artists to adapt many of their ideas, but some of them just can't happen this year and we don't want to lose them, they are just too good! So we are very pleased to announce that b-side festival will be taking place this year with all the joy, care and excitement in a new four-day festival format running from 9th to 12th September with events and newly commissioned artworks that can be enjoyed in a COVID safe environment. And then... we will be back again in September 2022 with another feast for the senses, where more of our commissioned artists wonderful plans can be realised. Our full programme for this years b-side festival will be announced in June 2021. We are delighted to be supporting brand new site responsive work by Caitlin Akers, Anna Brownsted, Dan Shorten, Katie Surridge, Joe Borez & James Laming, Olivia Furber & Ramzi Maqdisi and Sadie Hennessy as well as our new digital programme That Other Place. More to be announced, but for now just get those dates in the diary!"

DAVID SMITH 'THIS IS WHERE THE PARTY ENDS'

NIGEL DAWES AND DAVID SMITH: WORSE THINGS HAPPEN AT SEA

"Bringing together the work of David Smith and Nigel Dawes can only produce a show that is intriguing, elegant, and beguiling. Dawes uses discarded and rediscovered plastic components to construct quirky, humorous, and slightly disturbing sculptural assemblages, or arranges identical but uniquely sea-worn plastic items into beautiful series. Smith's intimate, mesmeric drawings use repetitive elements that have been erased, redacted, or distorted by chance actions: traces of past events that read like DNA sequences or archaeological crop marks. Both artists create work evoking the landscape and suggesting hidden stories, frequently imposing rules to frame their ideas yet allowing serendipity and coincidence to be a catalyst. Their materials may be quite different, yet they share a pattern language and similar aesthetic. This results in an exhibition that is intellectually stimulating, visually intriguing and emotionally calming. If you love minimalist, non-representational art with a conceptual flavour, Smith and Dawes deliver the individuality and creativity you seek. If that is not usually your style, be brave and visit anyway, you may be pleasantly surprised."

23 - 29 June: Malthouse Gallery, The Town Mill, Mill Lane, LYME REGIS, DT7 3PU. 10.30am - 5pm. 01297 444042 / townmill.org.uk.

SERENA CURMI

Three women dressed in demure Victorian high-necked dresses look out across the years from these tiny portraits. Despite their vulnerability these are strong faces, they defy their reduction to the anonymity of a number. The artist gives them back their dignity and makes them visible again. These paintings of unnamed women won for SERENA CURMI the Evolver Wessex Artist Prize in the Royal West of England Academy 168th Open exhibition.

Curmi is not a portrait painter. She trained as an illustrator at Falmouth, but abandoned illustration for Fine Art, initially 'making painterly and ethereal paintings of women but not from photographs'. The seismic change to her life when she became a mother led her to rethink her practice as well as her life. She turned to landscape, making paintings of the mountains she had encountered during her extensive travels to locations as far apart as Patagonia, Banff in Canada and New Zealand. Simultaneously she started the asylum portraits using 'a similar monochromatic palette for both subjects' and in both referencing old photography.

Her interest in people incarcerated in asylums was triggered by an article she read about Bethlem Hospital in London. Her initial research led her there and she spent a day in their archive, examining the admission books from the late 1800s.

Returning home Curmi visited Bristol Archives, which house The Bristol Asylum records, to continue her research. Many of the photos were damaged, but of those that were usable it was often the expression on a face, hinting at their emotional state, that arrested her attention. The reasons for an individual's admission and notes about their behaviour and treatment made sobering reading. The most common diagnosis was 'Melancholia' which seems, since ancient times, to have been used as a catch-all term to describe a range of physical and mental ailments.

This self-imposed project, although intended as a sideline to her main landscape work, began to haunt her. She wandered the streets of Bristol finding the houses where these people had lived, feeling that it provided an added dimension to her understanding of the face before her. Concealing the identity of her subjects was deliberate, and their anonymity emphasises the fact that once admitted these people no longer had an identity. Curmi felt that she was 'tapping into our deep fears that it could have been any one of us, had we lived during that time'. She started reading about Victorian London and the social implications of Victorian morality, but she is wary of the pitfalls of the project developing beyond the visual to a time-consuming examination of Victorian social mores.

She has produced dozens of these little paintings of both men and women, working in oils using thinners, so the process is more akin to the technique of watercolour than that of oil painting. In her mountain paintings, the scale is larger and less delicacy is required so she pushes the paint around with rags rather than using fine sable haired brushes. The portraits are worked on ten centimetre square sanded board, which provides a very smooth surface but enough tooth remains to hold the paint. It helps to retain the faded sepia quality so typical of early photography.

Many of the images were taken outside set against a backdrop of bushes or a brick wall, presumably the garden of the asylum. Given that they were taken in the early days of photography, the available equipment would have necessitated daylight. The photos are decontextualised by removing the backgrounds and consequently standardising them in a way that emphasises the consequences of an individual's institutionalisation.

It was a new departure for Curmi to work directly from photographs. She makes numerous preparatory pencil drawings from these tiny images in order to learn the contours of a face and absorb the expression. The result is powerful, sensitive portraits of women who were deprived of their freedom and largely forgotten by society. Poignantly they are now remembered, immortalised in paint, but are still only identified by a number.

DORSET ART WEEKS

22 May - 6 June 2021

NORRIE DE MONTIGNY (VENUE 114)

FRANNY OWEN (VENUE 97)

KIT BENWELL (VENUE 7)

This year the team, artists and makers behind DORSET ART WEEKS bring you a slightly different version of this highly anticipated biennial event.

For artists and makers who plan to open their studio doors in a normal fashion, expect things to look a little different, with many resourcefully using outdoor space! Some venues will be by appointment only, with others online for DAW 2021.

The three different ways you can see and experience all these brilliant venues will be clearly labelled on the new Dorset Art Weeks app and website. Both enable you to browse by artform and include links to artist's own platforms to find more information and facilitate sales.

This event is being run in partnership with EVOLVER. The DORSET ART WEEKS MAGAZINE 2021, featuring all venues taking part - in whatever form, is now available at all Evolver outlets throughout the region.

For those that want to enjoy DAW 2021 from the comfort of their own home, there will be online events such as studio visits, artist talks and demonstrations to get involved in.

However you discover Dorset Art Weeks this year, we hope the wonderful breadth of talent this county has to offer will continue to inspire you, we feel lucky to have so many talented artists and makers on our doorstep!

Whenever you visit, please wear a mask and respect the 2 metre distance rule and all sanitising arrangements that are in place.

The Dorset Art Weeks App is available free via the App Store and Google Play. For more information and news, follow @dorsetartweeks on Instagram, Facebook and Twitter. We look forward to sharing the great visual art and craft on offer.
